essay from the year 2011 in the subject cultural studies european studies grade a university of london course ma writing for performance language english abstract through a discussion of peter brook s the tragedy of hamlet 2000 complicité s mnemonic 1999 and song of the goat s macbeth 2010 we see clear examples of how these productions are using no place theatre as a site for embracing cultural equality rather than cultural ambiguity on stage as these productions all search for the universal values which bond different cultures together the expansion of the global market has inevitably had an incredible impact on the shaping of contemporary theatre this can especially be felt through the rising popularity of no place theatre which often strips back cultural specificity and replaces it with spectacle dan rebellato refers to this theatre as mctheatre a genre under which he includes big brand productions such as the blue man group cats and the phantom of the opera these productions often embrace cultural ambiguity in a way which allows them to both move anywhere and even more importantly sell anywhere their no place quality allows for their every place relevance as they and sometimes even profit more from their merchandise than their actual shows hence the values of these productions are very much the values of the global market to sell as broadly and quickly as possible while such a discussion may give the label of no place theatre a negative association globalization has also led to another strand of theatre one which becomes a response to rather than the result of globalization this is the theatre produced by artists such as peter brook complicité theatre and song of the goat theatre companies who go against the grain of the global market by using no place theatre as a site for returning to cosmopolitan and universalist values rather than the global market values unlike globalized commercial theatre the no place quality produced by these artists is in no way the result of cultural ambiguity instead these companies chose to represent a variety of different cultures on stage linking these productions to a place that is both here and there but above all by striving to represent different cultures on stage these companies return to a sense of cultural equality one which embraces universalist values which zygmunt bauman notes

this text examines the ways in which peter brook robert lepage and robert wilson have fundamentally reworked shakespeare s famous play andy lavender has had direct access to all three productions attending rehearsals as well as performances of the shows
